2017 TITLE	Promoting Well-being in the 21st Century: Psychological Contributions for Social, Economic, and Environmental Challenges
DATE TIME PLACE	Thursday, 20 April 2017 3:00pm - 6:00pm Conference Room 4 United Nations Headquarters, New York, NY* *Directions will be posted on the website and emailed to registrants prior to the event.
Theme Detailed program and list of speakers to be made available.	In 2015, the United Nations established the target of promoting mental health and well-being, as an important global priority, including it in the 2030 Agenda for Sustainable Development that outlines the Sustainable Development Goals (SDGs). This Psychology Day program considers ways in which theory, research, and practice in the psychology of well-being can increase the welfare of individuals globally to facilitate achievement of the SDGs, and to address the challenges of contemporary social, economic, and environmental systems. In response to the Social threat of violence, the speaker will discuss psychological strategies to develop and strengthen peace and social harmony at the local and international level. In response to the Economic threat of dominance by an ascendant class, the speaker will discuss research on ways to increase and protect well-being for diverse and underserved groups. In response to the Environmental threat of climate change, the speaker will cover strategies for active coping with the consequences of environmental instability and for supporting adherence to the principles of the Paris Accord.
